On existentially closed and generic nilpotent groups

We shall try to give a fairly complete account of the theory, but there will be a certain emphasis on classes of nilpotent groups, locally finite groups, and extensions. In other words: If there is a tuple a 1,…, a n in N such that φ a 1,…, a n, b 1,…, b n holds in N, then such a tuple also exists in M.

Existentially Closed Groups in Specific Classes

Let κ be an infinite cardinal.

We also prove that every countable CSA-group without involutions embeds into a finitely generated one having, up to conjugacy, the same maximal abelian subgroups, except maybe the infinite cyclic ones. We also show that for each regular strong limit cardinal κ, there exists κ-existentially closed groups.

On existentially closed and generic nilpotent groups

From this basis the theory is developed and many of the more recently discoveredresults are proved and discussed.

Existentially Closed Groups

The aim is to assist group theorists to find their way into a corner of their subject which has its own characteristic flavour, but which is recognizably group theory.
