Such companies were not fully incorporated, and their territorial grants came from some legally incorporated company.

Medieval English wool trade

Vassalage Before a lord could grant land a fief to someone, he had to make that person a vassal.

Trading Companies

One of the major markers of a court was ceremony. The trade's liveliest period, 1250—1350, was 'an era when trade in wool had been the backbone and driving force in the English medieval economy'. Apart from the very pleasant easy walks of Friar's Crag and Centenary Stone, my favourite hike at Ulswater was the uphill hike around Gowbarrow Fell, past the touristy Aira Force Cascades.

In exchange for the use of the fief and the protection of the lord, the vassal would provide some sort of service to the lord. The company faced entirely different circumstances in the Atlantic from those experienced by the VOC. The ability to produce raw wool, and then process it into textiles on site, made the Heydons even more rich and powerful.
