The Canadian connection: A co

It does not help much, however, when it comes to the STRATEGIC CHOICE IN A PRODUCT MARKET FRAMEWORK. There are well-recognized generic orientations for firms, such as low-cost producer versus producer of differentiated goods; niche versus full-line producer; and single-industry business enterprise versus one that is diversified in either related or unrelated areas. Vulnerability relates positively to essentiality and is negatively associated with substitutability. Highlighting domestic dynamics, Dai argued that international institutions influence national policies through empowering domestic constituencies.

Although the framework builds on a long line of research associated with the World Bank, it differs in important ways. But the early formal work had no way to handle the problem: why sacrifice parsimony for no obvious gain? The workshop was held 21 January in Wageningen, the Netherlands. They were equally dependent on one another.

European and International Cooperation Strategy

Since the mid-1970s the inward orientation has been increasingly recognized as a low-performing strategy regardless of where a country is located on the producer-consumer dimension. We begin with the developmental logic of international cooperation theory ICT, which is not a single theory but a family of closely related models. The prevailing motivation for Canadian foreign aid is a humanitarian concern for the many millions of people who are obviously far poorer than most Canadians.

International development cooperation

A distinction between the rise and fall of a particular variant of economic strategy and generic propositions about economic strategies per se needs to be drawn.
