Higher Education and the Opportunity Gap

For instance, if the dominant modes of communication in our society were sign-based rather than spoken, perhaps deafness would not be considered a disability. . Why does Title IX not require the same amount be spent on men and women's sports? That means they have a 70 percent chance of moving up.

The Equality of Opportunity Project

Over the past three decades, tuition at public four-year colleges has more than doubled, even after adjusting for inflation. A government policy that requires equal treatment can pose problems for lawmakers.

How Can Universities Better Support International Students?

The b condition admits of two broadly different construals. When it comes to gender, relative to females, male performance is often overestimated.

What is Equal Opportunity?

Other work arrangements that have been found successful with students include keeping them on as part-time, remote employees after they go back to school depending on the type of work they do for you and whether they have a willing manager , and having them come back and work over school breaks for a couple of weeks. Many more students need access to vastly more affordable and quality higher education opportunitiesincluding tuition- free degree options. Produced by the ACLU Department of Public Education.

Courses and Communities of Practice

A key component of this debate is whether students should receive a patriotic civic education—that is, one that prioritizes shoring up their allegiance to their state over their capacity to reflect critically upon its potential shortcomings.

Your Right to Equality in Education

In other words, if Smith and Jones have the same native talent, and Smith is born of wealthy, educated parents of a socially favored ethnicity and Jones is born of poor, uneducated parents of a socially disfavored ethnicity, then if they develop the same ambition to become scientists or Wall Street lawyers, they will have the same prospects of becoming scientists or Wall Street lawyers if FEO prevails. We would then see industrial and occupational clumping: Those of Korean descent might dominate the hotel industry, while those of Hispanic descent might dominate construction; women might be more likely to be lawyers and doctors, men more likely to be business entrepreneurs, and so on. One of the group's members explained: I am not asking for sympathy but for an equal right with men to earn my own living in the best way open and under the most favorable conditions that I could choose for myself.

But it does seem likely that there is a direct link between how much money your parents have and how well you do. But whether the expected consequences generated by an affirmative action plan that violates formal equality of opportunity are bad, good, or neutral, there remains the violation of formal equality of opportunity, which some will view as in itself a grave injustice. No democratic society can justify failing to educate the children of its poorest students.
