Instructions concerning erecting of a library presented to my lord, the President De Mesme / by Gabriel Naudeus ...; and now interpreted by Jo. Evelyn, Esquire. (1661): Evelyn, John: 9781240946877: vivchar.tom.ru: Books

Mellan, 1765, after himself— CC BY 4. The first are full of books in-quarto and folio, and, moreover, are accompanied by a large desk breast high prevailing all around; and fifty Corinthian columns of wood, tall strong, and worked with the cleanliness.

EVELYN, John (translator)

Whereas Naudé did not believe in splurging on fine bindings, preferring to invest the money in extra books plainly bound, Evelyn had a penchant for decorated bindings. Presence of this leaf not included in above pagination statement.

Building a Library in the Seventeenth (and the Twenty

Students are warned that for reasons of time the syllabus as it is currently structured does not explicitly address non-Western cultures, but this could change. A2 N21 In addition to this book on libraries, Special Collections owns a copy of the book Evelyn wrote on trees for the Royal Society, Sylva, or A discourse of forest-trees, and the propagation of timber in His Majesties dominions. Here we look at how practices to appraise, contest, and secure credit affected the history of reading, especially in the realms of politics and science.

NAUDÉ, Gabriel (1600)

We also look at one of the most successful genres created to exploit the passions of readers. It was during this time that he attracted the attention of Cardinal Richelieu, chief minister to French King Louis XIII, who took him under his wing.
