Multilateral Trade Negotiations and Agreements Under GATT and WTO

One expert reported that, according to an OECD study, 95 per cent of the anti-dumping cases are actually related to safeguard aspects i.

Panel discussion on the development implications of the proposed WTO plurilateral negotiations on electronic commerce

A stronger BRICS besides bringing fresh lease of life to the stalled Doha round can also prepare a new agenda for development-led trade liberalisation. Literacy rates have risen sharply, and other indicators of well being have improved dramatically in most countries.

Multilateral Trade Negotiations and Agreements Under GATT and WTO

Preference-receiving developing countries may consider advocating the introduction of ways and means which would provide them with enhanced access to the allocation of minimum access tariff rate quotas, or which would ensure that their preferential access i. Despite the limited extent to which the Agreement did actually reduce export subsidies and improve market access, its final text is nevertheless an important landmark in the liberalization of the agricultural sector. The present experience is that MRAs have been negotiated between countries at similar levels of development and have not involved developing countries.

An Enduring Need: The Importance of Multilateralism in the 21st Century, Remarks by Anne O. Krueger

The occupations differ significantly with respect to their regulatory frameworks, including conditions for market access, and among countries for example, accountancy vs.

Panel discussion on the development implications of the proposed WTO plurilateral negotiations on electronic commerce

Discussions focussed largely on the latter and on ways of dealing with e-commerce within the WTO framework. Secondly, a possible stronger multilateral discipline on investment would restrict even further the design and implementation of industrial policies.

Relevance of Policy Space for Development : Implications for Multilateral Trade Negotiations

He noted the need to understand the challenges of e-commerce and the analysis of the GATT and GATS agreements. Some countries do not allow charter flights; there is no competition in maritime transport, which is dominated by European shippers; and in most cases telecommunications and financial services are controlled by state monopolies.
