The Role of Family Dynamics in Teenage Pregnancy and Childbearing in Sub

Children in undereducated households are more likely to be undernourished and to suffer disease from poor sanitation and health practices, and from inadequate diets, usually compounded by environment factors such as deficient health facilities. Tarsicio Castañeda was the project's senior consultant and Enrique Aldaz-Carroll worked on the project from the outset as an IDB intern and then as a consultant. Furthermore, health and medical establishments are unable to guarantee even the most basic quality of care.

The role of men in families: achieving gender equity and supporting children.

It follows from this basic concept of ITP, that its prevalence across countries will depend on the extent of inequality in respect to income and schooling, which abundant research on the economics of education shows to be highly correlated.

You can have an interesting discussion here about the role of the state or colony in this case in determining who would be a slave and who would be free. The results showed that single motherhood was positively associated with stunting in Cameroon and DRC, but not in Nigeria.

Why children are not vaccinated: a review of the grey literature

The children of adolescent single mothers complete secondary education in much lower proportion than other children; and the impact effect on the representative child's probability of finishing secondary is strongly negative -13 points;. Also, children in lower income households are often forced to drop out of school to supplement family income. The procedure is dangerous and dirty and can have serious consequences for the health of the young girls involved.
