German drama

The rest of his life Barlach spent in Güstrow, in solitude and almost complete seclusion.

Seven Expressionist Plays: Oskar Kokoschka: Calder Publications

The first full-length Expressionist play was The Son by Walter Hasenclever, which was published in 1914 and first performed in 1916. In addition to his sculpture, Barlach also wrote eight Expressionist dramas, two novels and an autobiography Ein selbsterzähltes Leben 1928, and had a distinguished oeuvre of woodcuts and lithographs from about 1910 onwards, including illustrations for his own plays. After the war, beginning with a large exhibition in Vienna in 1947, Kokoschka was honoured with a series of exhibitions of his work in Zürich, London, Venice, and elsewhere throughout Europe and in the United States, and he became financially secure for the first time.
