	2015 Amazon Lives number of requests	The European Commission accused Amazon of violating its agreements with publishers by using its market power to secure the emergence or development of individual e-book platforms. The Commission in question requested publishers to offer Amazon the best prices and commercial conditions they gave to Amazon's competitors.	2017 The European Commission accepted Amazon's proposals to obtain from using these devices and clearing them in any new agreements for a period of five years, and made these proposals legally binding.
	2015 Qualcomm Pit predators	The European Commission suspected Qualcomm of offering preferential prices to its customers in exchange for exclusively or quasi-exclusively purchasing its products. It also suspected Qualcomm of predatory pricing by charging prices for its products that were lower than the cost of production in order to hurt competitors.	The investigation is ongoing.
	2015 Google Android	The European Commission accused Google of preventing smartphone manufacturers from installing Google apps (notably Chrome) as a prerequisite for installing the Google Play app store. Moreover, Google allegedly paid manufacturers and operators to install Google Search exclusively on their devices. Finally, Google allegedly abused its dominant position to limit the ability of manufacturers to offer open source versions of Android on their smartphones, thus limiting Google services.	2018 The European Commission fined Google €4.34 billion. Google has announced that it intends to appeal.

Europe 1992 and its Impact on Pacific Futures

In relation to existing software, the privacy options had to be presented at the time of the first update and in any event, by a longstop date. Meanwhile, others have called for clearer separation between the prosecution and adjudicatory roles within the Commission, in order to strengthen its ability to act as the guardian of the Treaty in enforcing the Stability and Growth Pact.

Research

Efforts were stepped up to relocate and resettle people in need of protection. This year showed us that Europe is more than just a Single Market, more than a single currency, more than a set of institutions and treaties.

They included a major overhaul of the rules for investment firms. The rules will cover up to 95 % of EU imports as of January 2021. In December the EU agreed to modernise its anti-dumping and anti-subsidy regulations to make its trade-defence instruments better adapted to the challenges of the global economy.

Services, for example, remain underdeveloped and could help to bring about more integrated and resilient product markets. The European Council re-elected Donald Tusk as its President from 1 June 2017 until 30 November 2019. Towards deeper Economic and Monetary Union 2017 demanded stamina and a clear vision from all those working to design a stronger, more democratic and more united European Union.
