René Magritte, a Brussels icon who captivates the world

Similar to other famous artists, Magritte started drawing at a very young age, but years passed until he finally met his true artistic passion and found his particular style, surrealism. They seek instantly recognizable images because they are only likely to buy one work by the artist, and tend to gravitate towards works that are aesthetically beautiful, or perhaps, as these are mostly male buyers, feature a naked woman. Like Dali, Magritte depended on commercial and graphic design to pay the bills.
