Youth Component of the Community Plan

With the dangerous path that these individuals have chosen for themselves, giving back to the military is something that reaches home for a lot of people. Since many of these soldiers experience post-traumatic stress disorder PTSD after witnessing heinous crimes and living in unthinkable conditions, you can organize a variety of programs that can assist these individuals in their road to recovery. They tend to be more open to mixed use and higher-density development, and offer unique perspectives on architecture.

Community Boards

Limitations The Community Board, its District Manager, and its office staff serve as advocates and service coordinators for the community and its residents. The curriculum is aligned with school curriculum, allowing city planning to integrate into classes as diverse as government or physics.

Youth and Community Development

Together, these individuals will form your program planning or advisory committee. Communicate to everyone involved how his or her input was incorporated.
