Shakespeare survey : Nicoll, Allardyce, 1894

The idea, as explained by the Executive Director of the Trust, Hugh Hunt, was to emphasize the importance of the spoken word, and not the spectacle, in the plays the audience were studying. The touring company was led by Clement McCallm, the other members being Eleanor Elhot, Bruce Barry, Guy LeClaire and Roger McDougall. Since 1948, Survey has published the best international scholarship in English and many of its essays have become classics of Shakespeare criticism. The answer in the end is the play, and it is poetry; it cannot be turned into prose.

In this manner, Hermione, though unmentioned, is not forgotten. But the question which too few is, what kind of emotional response were the Romances designed to arouse? It will likewise be observed that the percentage of feminine endings in the scenes ascribed to Fletcher in Henry VIII is close to the percentage in the corresponding scenes of The Two Noble Kinsmen. Again, the silliness of the plays is not so apparent to readers more at home in fairy-tale than James appears to be.
