Silencing My Linear Self: Richard Tuttle on the Spiritual in Contemporary Art

This is sort of a little joke, but the only thing I would replicate is the structural line underneath the green in basis25. Indeed, prior to the construction of the Tate Modern piece, Tuttle created a series of smaller fabric works for New York's Pace Gallery entitled Looking for the Map, which effectively served as studies for I Don't Know. In his own words, Tuttle proclaims that he at once loves materials, and is also not really interested in them.

Dissimilarity in Unity: Richard Tuttle Interviewed

For Tuttle, matter is then defined by penetrations of abstract space. Other solo exhibitions include M WOODS, Beijing, China 2019 ; Mu.

Richard Tuttle

While the gesture of presenting an artwork as the document of a process is exemplary of its time and place - New York in the 1960s - the processes which this crumpled, irregularly shaped object invites us to imagine are not the austere philosophical disciplines of Tuttle's Conceptualist contemporaries, but the routines of everyday life: eating, working, socializing. These include not only reflections and commentaries on art and drawing, but also tributes to artist friends, including various texts on Agnes Martin, travel notes, poems and lectures that Tuttle delivered in various institutions.

RICHARD TUTTLE 1990

Tuttle's decision to hang the work with nails, and the scrappy, organic-seeming shape of the canvas, challenge the idea of the work's preciousness: we wonder if the sides were cut intentionally, or whether the shape has been assembled from discarded sections of existing frames. What are its physical and structural qualities? Museum of Contemporary Art Chicago.
