رحل

Massive protests continued in Cairo, Alexandria, and other cities. After the first pass of the two , the crowd cheered and subsequent passes triggered louder chants, laughing, and waving. It was also one of the hubs for private air travel in and around Egypt, but most had departed earlier that day.

Field Works

In addition, Al-Mutanabbi lost Sayf al-Daula's favor because of his political ambition to be Wali. Alongside these trends there was also an ongoing process whereby speakers and writers of other languages who became Muslims and worked in the various offices of the court translated works into Arabic.

Marthiya

Protesters in burnt down the governor's office in response to his reluctance to provide enough housing for the city's residents.

Field Works

Mahfouz wrote more than 45 novels and short-story collections, as well as some 30 screenplays and several plays.
