The mirage of modernization (1995 edition)

The first front-line aircraft variant to have been designed specifically in response to the export market, Taiwan was the first country to order the type in 1992, followed by Qatar in 1994. Capable of automatically locking onto multiple targets at first contact, the radar could detect flying targets travelling as low as 200 ft. On the other end of the speed spectrum, the Mirage 2000 proved to be a capable low-speed aircraft, as demonstrated at the in September 1978, during which Dassault pilot Guy Mitaux-Maurourd raised the aircraft's nose to 25° angle of attack AoA as the aircraft slowed to 100 knots.
