Encyclopedia of Greater Philadelphia

In total war production Pennsylvania ranked sixth among the states, in shipbuilding fifth, and in ordnance fourth. Craftsmen listed information about the materials used, the quantity and cost of materials, and the names and pieces of finished products. Many years later, this practice, while a testament to the craftsman's confidence in his distinctive style, is an impediment to those trying to identify regional pieces.

The first statewide farm products show was held in Harrisburg in January 1907. Master cordwainers argued that journeymen societies had formed illegal combinations designed to exact wage increases from employers. However, while the masters and journeymen both challenged underselling, which affected both profits and wages, they did so as separate entities, showing early signs of dissension within the craft.
