Public Sector Solutions

The private sector runs businesses more efficiently, makes more money and encourages competition. But some public sector services do gain financially, like the Post Office, for example. Public Sector Organisations exist for the following reasons: i To provide public goods and services to individuals and institutional consumers regardless of their ability to pay ii To provide good and services whose investment capital is quite high and hence cannot be provided by the private sector or whose returns are low and therefore unattractive to the private sector, though necessary iii To achieve a net social benefit rather than net profit so as to enhance equity of access to meeting needs of water, electricity, food, shelter, transport, health and communication, etc.
