The Merchant of Prato: Francesco di Marco Datini, 1335

The foundation for the poor created by Datini's will continues in Prato to this day. But as the war dragged on and the hostilities escalated, the small community of Val d'Orcia found themselves helping evacuees, orphans, refugees, prisoners of war and soldiers from both sides, concerned less with who was fighting whom than caring for those who needed their aid. Returning home, he expanded his operations, setting up offices all across the Mediterranean, which he oversaw through an unceasing flow of correspondence.

He also opened a series of other offices in Italy and Spain and transacted business in Brugge Bruges and London. In the frescoed rooms on the ground floor one can admire the beautiful residence and the works of art that adorn it, and also retrace the merchant's personality, his relationship with his wife Margherita, his business activities, the history of the construction of the palace and of the Ceppi charitable institution, housed here since 1410.

Yet we loathe when dangers occur, or those things that shorten the life of man.

Francesco Datini

I think this inscription explained why Prato built a monument for Francesco: in honor of his charity, his contribution to local community and thank his support to poor. The Merchant of Prato is a masterpiece of modern narrative history. Among the many charity activities, Datini was particularly close to San Francesco's monks.
