How To Improve Parental Engagement In Primary Schools (Focus On Maths)

These programs should be based on latest researches conducted. The nature of that involvement, however, determines the value of the assistance.

The role that parents play in their children's academic progress at a previously disadvantaged primary school in Cape Town

The results indicated that both mothering and fathering styles were associated with academic success whereas rejection and neglect from the parents were found to be highly detrimental to academic achievement. This would be the practical utility of this present empirical inquiry. Chapter I Introduction Education is essential for the development of society.

Edutopia

Other studies have also shown that parental involvement of middle and high school students are equally important.

Parents' Literacy and Their Children's Success in School: Recent Research, Promising Practices, and Research Implications

However, 4 per cent of primary school children and 28 per cent of secondary school children never receive any assistance at all with their homework.
