During Pahlavi period particularly in the Pahlavi period II, other patterns such as focus of poverty and inequality in center of the city, heterogeneity resulting from merge of the rural textures in Tehran, creation and expansion of the worn textures, suburbanization and creation of informal settlements have been formed in addition to deepened north-south spatial gap of the city. Others go further and integrate forums for community decisionmaking to ensure that the DDR process fosters understanding and is embedded in traditional conflict resolution mechanisms. More interestingly, the comparison between the LANDSAT ETM+ image of the Neyshabour plain and the subsidence zone indicates that the subsidence pattern exactly follows the Neyshabour plain fan.
