Brian remembers even using soap mixed with gouache in an attempt to get the paint to bubble.

President's address and the sectional addresses. 1831

I think our level of illustrators is quite high: a modern and high quality handmade! A ball hangs in the air in the upper right portion of the drawing, with most of the men looking up at it. At the heart of the story is a mother pushing gender and racial boundaries to make room for her children to push them even further. It's such a low-tech old school gimmick, but I couldn't get enough of it back then, and I still love it.
