Examples: He will come tomorrow, she must do it at once, not he wills or she musts. Sometimes the distinction between auxiliary verbs and light verbs is overlooked or confused.

Auxiliary verb

The following example contains three auxiliary verbs and one dispositive participle: The paper will have been scrutinized by Fred. Absolute synonyms are substitutable in all possible contexts in all possible semantic, grammatical, sociolinguistic ways. The verbs do and have can also function as full verbs or as , which can be a source of confusion about their status.
