Women's Reproductive Health

Description This study examined levels, trends, differentials and determinants of infant and child mortality in Zimbabwe covering the period from the late 1960s to the early 1990s. The lack of substantial changes in compositional characteristics can be explained by the fact that Kenya, Rwanda and Zimbabwe did not experience significant economic development over the 1990—2015 period.

How Increased Contraceptive Use has Reduced Maternal Mortality

It is therefore recommended that demographic research does not dissociate its objects of enquiry like fertility from the socioeconomic environments within which they are nested. Studies in Family Planning, 18, 128—143.

Towards achieving the family planning targets in the African region: a rapid review of task sharing policies

Temporal changes in sample distribution The three countries have experienced some long-term significant transformations in the compositional characteristics of the married samples Table. We also explored the proportions of women desiring four or more children and found that most women expressed this desire throughout and this may explain why stalling has occurred at high levels of TFRs.
