List of style guides

If there are conflicts between this guide and The Canadian Style or any other resource, this guide takes priority for content published online. Too many links on a page can cause people to leave the page without reading important information or can discourage them from completing a task. Alphabetical lists Only present your web content in an alphabetical order if it's the most logical and intuitive approach for the audience.

The Canadian Style

The Canadian Style

Include only the information people need to complete the task. Don't use the abbreviation for the act, because it makes the text harder to follow. Among the myriad problems that it covers, there's a useful section on Canadian geographical names and a quick look at French typographical rules.
