Though 2016 EUGS can be a standardising instrument for future national strategic revisions, both the EU and MS need higher strategic harmonisation to cope with the present migration crisis and to move towards a path of an effective common migration and asylum system. To ensure that this key principle of the General Data Protection Regulation is applied in practice, the EDPS will issue guidance documents. However, not all Member States were willing to participate in the scheme, reflecting contrasting attitudes in public opinion and difficulties in balancing solidarity and responsibility between different EU countries. As data protection affects almost every EU policy area and is a key factor in legitimising and increasing trust in EU policies, the new EDPS Strategy aims to provide a framework through which to promote a culture of data protection in the European institutions.

It was just a matter of time before the politics of self-fulfilling prophecy became a reality, with a plethora of radical Islamist movements taking advantage of this shocking war.
