The author Adam Higginbotham, whose book Midnight in Chernobyl 2019 illuminates the tragedy with quotations from his hundreds of interviews, also relied on a trove of Soviet-era documents collected by the Ukrainian National Chernobyl Museum in Kiev. Let us now examine the corresponding notes in the Prison Notebooks, on the basis of the edition prepared by the International Gramsci Society IGS the text corresponds to the critical edition edited by V.

Joint Soviet

In periods between conferences the circuit committee periodically submits reports to the general meetings or conferences of city or precinct organizations. The organization serving any given region is considered supreme in relation to all organizations serving but a part of that region.

But it is very dubious whether they have ever really given consideration to the extensive experience of the entire world communist movement, whether they have ever really considered the interests, the goal and tasks of the international proletarian movement as a whole, and whether they really have a general line for the international communist movement which conforms with Marxism-Leninism. We are conscious of the responsibility that falls on our two Parties; we must not disappoint these expectations.

He calculated that the Red Army, fatigued by its battles with Kolchak and Denikin, would not be able to withstand the attack of the Polish forces. There is no text or speech, neither in freedom nor in prison, in which Gramsci expressed a negative opinion much less denigrated the leadership of the Bolshevik Party and comrade Stalin. We reserve the right of public reply.

An Open Letter To the Members of the Communist Party of the Soviet Union

In this situation, the possibility of preventing a new world war and preserving world peace will increase with the further development of the strength of the socialist countries, the further development of the national-liberation movement, of the revolutionary struggles of the oppressed peoples, of the movement in defence of world peace and, at the same time, with the full utilization of the contradictions in the imperialist camp.
