According to data from the 2011 National Household Survey, 22 per cent of the population aged 16—65 are immigrants. Their median annual earnings in 2015 were 7% more than men with a college diploma, 31% more than men with a high school diploma, and 11% less than men with a bachelor's degree.

How college differs in Canada and the US

The highest proportions of the population with a college diploma were found in the four Atlantic provinces Newfoundland and Labrador, Prince Edward Island, New Brunswick and Nova Scotia.

Canadian Colleges and Universities

September is usually the start date for the application but many universities start accepting applications in January or even May.

History of Education in Canada

Educated people not only earn higher incomes but also contribute disproportionately to business innovation, productivity, and national economic performance.

Education, training and learning statistics

One response was to have fewer children and to invest more in their education. Since the 1990s, the proportion of women with a bachelor's degree or higher has grown much faster than among men. Building on success: EduCanada brand Launched in 2016, EduCanada is a collaborative promotional initiative involving the provinces and territories through Global Affairs Canada and the Council of Ministers of Education, Canada.
