Hermeneutics in the Wesleyan Tradition

It is a correct presumption that Wesleyans have had passed down from their founder, John Wesley, a particular methodology for hermeneutics, one that has been used successfully by evangelical Christianity for years. I quickly realised that the school believed in itself and was on its toes to spring forward towards the front and in Redlich and Honter we had two who would give any other school a hard tussle for the first place in scholarship.

Double Blue International

The Bible tells me so: reading the Bible as Scripture. Rosa Luxemburg Co-founder of the Spartacists.

Methodism

I can't find another reference to this in the article, and I think it would be great if someone who knows about it can add something about it - possibly in the section? Their doctrines are hardly recognizable as being Methodist at all. In more recent times in Barbados, Victor Alphonso Cooke born 1930 and Lawrence Vernon Harcourt Lewis born 1932 are strong influences on the Methodist Church on the island. His interest in public affairs was such that there was hardly a public movement in the early 20th century in which he did not play a part.
