Risk assessment: Template and examples

An example of the shared decision-making model, the SHARE approach, is illustrated in. In practice, a shared decision-making framework can operationalize the informed consent process in a way that is relational and patient-centered and does not nullify the contributions of the obstetrician—gynecologist to medical decision making. For example, some medicines used to treat health problems could be harmful if taken during pregnancy.

Informed Consent and Shared Decision Making in Obstetrics and Gynecology

Some informed consent challenges are universal to medicine, whereas other challenges arise more commonly in the practice of obstetrics and gynecology than in other specialty areas.
