The Pseudolus of Plautus

In the former case indignum facinus is an exclamation standing alone, as Adel.

T. Macci Plauti Mostellaria

The ellipse of some such word as conloqui seems the established explanation ; but if the phrase stood in this passage only, we might be led by comparing 1. Id quam 6b rem non volui, e'loquar.

The Andrian, Heautontimorumenos, and Hecyra of Terence

Papillon says, the idea of ' prognostic' may pass into that of 'warning. The verbs to be supplied are, ' quid vos agitis? Part I : The Caudine Disaster.

T. Macci Plauti Epidicus

Utor and potior are sometimes followed by the accusative in the comic, poets ; fungor always by accusative, with one doubtful exception Adel. Amarant is an unnecessary correction. With hints for continuous prose.

Of course Pamphilus, not Chremes, is the person with whom Simo will be principally angry ; but ' anger at the refusal of Chremes ' which Terence actually writes is much the same thing as ' anger with Pamphilus for causing the refusal. This view receives strong confirmation, if we can accept the story told by Suetonius of the recitation before the poet Caecilius ; for which see Introduction.
