Chapter Eighteen, Part I: The Chinese Communist Party's Global Ambitions (UPDATED)

Without trade, or if trade is limited, the opportunity for economic growth is limited. As the world's largest developing country and the largest developed country, and permanent members of the UN Security Council, our two countries are faced with a common responsibility of promoting peace, stability and prosperity in the Asia-Pacific region and the world as a whole. And I would say, too, that by contesting our supremacy in every domain, we can see it working against us in aggregate....
