The Project Gutenberg eBook of Contemporary One

Book, words and music by Melvin Van Peebles. That isn't meant as any kind of criticism, because a little originality goes a very long way in horror flicks.

RareSlashersReviewed's Profile

Oscar Cook was a kind of pulp Conrad, using his decade running a large chunk of Borneo as the basis for a series of memorably gruesome and ghoulish tales of colonial horror, generally featuring cannibalism, sexual revenge or unspeakable rites. English adaptation by Henry Hewes. At the request of the family, this series is restricted.

Personal Accident Protection for 30 volunteers category 3. It's hard to maintain whether it's down to the constant haunting shots of spacious corridors ending in spooky bright lights, the above-average editing or Zaza's terrific score, but one thing is for certain, it's definitely huge on atmosphere all the way through.

Victorian Plays Project

Produced by the Bristol Old Vic Company at the Theatre-Royal October, 1962 starring Diana Hoddinott, Keith Barron, etc. A man or a spirit? There are few familiar faces both from giallos and American films David Hess and Charles Napier. It's beginning to look like the star has returned to forcibly reclaim his property, and he's not willing to negotiate the sale possibilities with any money-snatching property-developers.
