Many state and federal courts have already required cross-examination in sexual harassment cases; nearly a year and a half ago, the Department of Education left little doubt that it would narrow the definition of sexual harassment and require live hearings and cross-examination.

NDE Board Report for December 2020

Schools under this policy would be allocated points based on multiple levels of performance.

Secretary: The Every Student Succeeds Act ESSA marks a great opportunity for states to advance accountability systems beyond those from the No Child Left Behind NCLB era.

A letter to the U.S. Department of Education (final signatory list)

Since several courts most notably the have held that cross-examination is constitutionally required, it is unlikely that courts reviewing the regulations will hold that the Department of Education does not have statutory authority under Title IX to do the same. More likely is that a Biden administration would initiate another long rulemaking process, one that would be followed by yet another round of judicial review. Educational Researcher, 43 1 , 45—54.

This has been shown to influence which students in a state benefit i. But university lawyers and Title IX offices have had ample time to prepare for this moment:
