What Did the Continents Look Like Millions of Years Ago?

Whereas the northernmost branch appeared to be topographically fixed at the Charlie—Gibbs Fracture Zone cutting the MAR at 52°—53°N , the number and intensity of the remaining branches, as well as their path over the MAR, were subject to intense variability.

North Atlantic Oscillation

Satellite-transmitted information on depth, temperature, and light level was processed using Wildlife Computers software.

The problem of correlations between South Europe and North Africa during the pleistocene

Examination of diving activity i. As a result, the significance of the frontal movements estimated from the combination of the data and the model is evaluated.

North Atlantic Oscillation

Rapid range shifts of species associated with high levels of climate warming.

Macroecological patterns of phytoplankton in the northwestern North Atlantic Ocean

In the Pacific, there is little information on migratory patterns.
