Empress of Mughal India

Jahangir's second son, Parviz, was weak and addicted to alcohol. She even held international diplomacy with other women of different countries.

Nur Jahan: Empress of Mughal India

The flared dress that she is wearing is a peshwaz. The Emperor sought her views on most matters before issuing orders, and even as , she acted as co-ruler with her husband, and Jahangir was very dependent on her advice. These illustrations do not provide an accurate depiction of the splendor and luxury that characterized the court of Nur Jahan, which was anything but subdued in color.
