Bhutto's objective in holding the meeting was not to consult with the scientists, Bhutto was already set on pursuing nuclear weapons, rather it was to inspire them to committing themselves to the quest. This modification would not affect the plant's suitability for its declared purpose - producing mixed oxide fuel for power reactors - but would prevent its direct use for producing plutonium for weapons. As a result Bhutto agreed to hold elections in March 1977, which his party the Pakistan Peoples Party or PPP won decisively.

Eurobarometers

The primary focus of proliferation control efforts at this time were focused on technology applicable to plutonium production, and emphasized restrictions on complete systems for production - such as reprocessing plants, or in the case of enrichment technology complete gas centrifuges.

Trump Unpopular Worldwide, American Image Suffers

A key motivation for this program was concern over India's well known progress toward having its own nuclear option, and the public declarations by key leaders in India that they must acquire nuclear arms.

Introduction: A Summary of Western European NonProliferation Policy from 1985 to 1987

Technology represents a clear opportunity but so could the energy transition, if handled with care. By autumn the Indian-East Pakistani border had become something close to a combat zone, with India and Pakistan trading intense firing across the border, while armed rebels operated from safe havens in India.
