Strictures on Occasional Hearing. — Reformed Presbyterian Church (Covenanted)

The truth is, this vastly increases its evil, and renders it the more hurtful, because it is thus the more infectious. It presents a very strong view of predestination. Do not such circumstances of conformity indicate much unfaithfulness to the cause of truth—that the persons themselves rank among the companions, after whom the true church is careful not to turn aside, and against whom she has lifted up a public testimony? If this has any weight it condemns all who hold any separate communion from any, where we may charitably believe the Lord has any of his people.

Observations on 'The Two Sons of Oil'

It is extraordinary that a body so measured in its phrases, and meek in its manners, as the Quakers appear to be, should have produced such fiery spirits as Fisher, whose intemperate language affords strong proof that he spake by another spirit than that of Jesus.

Accesserunt paranoia Scripturae Iota, necnon variantes lectiones ex plus 100 MSS. As population increased, and fresh settlers flowed in from England, especially between 1815 and 1835, these differences became acute, for many of the newcomers were imbued with the Radical doctrines then so prevalent among the English middle and lower classes.

THERE MIGHT BE DELAY THAN THE ESTIMATED DELIVERY DATE DUE TO COVID-19. It would have been too much to expect that this work should pass without opposition. His discussion of the two forms of the law and the two covenants and man's relation to each is of particular note and quite helpful to remember.

If any be afraid of such meetings of messengers, they have only to consider, that they are merely for counsel and advice, and are invested with no authority or power over the churches. London: Butterworths, 1874 de Colyar, Henry Anselm 1v. And where a person cannot have full and stated fellowship, it has been shown already, that he ought not to have occasional.

According to this principle, you must hold communion with the church of Rome; for bigoted as you reckon me, I am persuaded that many within the pale of the church of Rome are good men. If the personnel of the Executive Council was so poor, little could be expected of its nominees in the Legislative Council.
