2020 Banff Mountain Film Competition Finalists

Over the last thirty years however, a debate has raged regarding the size, nature, and purpose of the deer cull.

George Schaller's Remarkable Life in the Field

I felt a pang of longing as I looked at the pictures, some of them of very familiar scenes: the child herding, the nomad tent. In issue 151 Boxi writes exclusively for Cross Country, describing how he completed the remarkable feat. And there it was, the last Raute encampment in Nepal.

The Mongolian Chronicles by Allen Smutylo

A young girl poked me with a stick and giggled. In a corner of a large common area a klatch of young boys chopped and whittled chunks of wood. During the adventure, their perspectives on friendship, risk and the importance of the word wilderness evolve, making for memories of a lifetime; lifetimes which prove to not only to be finite, but worth sharing if the result is to maintain this special landscape, as it is, for generations to come.

George Schaller's Remarkable Life in the Field

Usually, teams rope up, carry ice axes, and take four or five days to reach the summit and get back to base camp.
