Defending the Earth by Murray Bookchin

In addition, rather than trying to preserve ecosystems in a static state, the rightist ecology upheld by Earth First! Routledge; Dolgoff, Sam, ed 1974. Dick Bass had made his fortune as an energy and resort entrepreneur. At first glance, at least, the garden scenario described by Nash bears more than a passing resemblance to the Utopian vision of social ecology.

Deep ecology

My ancestry is entirely northern European. It has a distinguished record of publishing little-known or undiscovered writers, many of whom have become major literary figures.

Defending the Earth: A Debate

This raises the question, however, of how can we organize a broad-based movement that can fundamentally change this system.

Books on Green Politics

What kind of spiritual perspective does this represent? There are two versions of the argument: either other life forms, and perhaps ecosystems themselves, are also sentient; or they are not, but sentience is not all that morally relevant. The Forest Service today is systematically destroying unprotected, roadless areas through a massive road-building campaign. .

Green debate: two radical views

Bookchin himself had long advocated, indeed pioneered, several of the key insights championed by deep ecologists.

Where We Are: Place, Pedagogy, and the Outer Limits

We must guard against this. Well, it has been stopped and we think we even have a fairly good chance of negotiating with the West Side Panel for the creation of a modest boulevard and a splendid park as part of a Hudson River Greenway that could stand as one of the great monuments to citizen ingenuity and environmental preservation in this society.

Where We Are: Place, Pedagogy, and the Outer Limits

Outside it, however, a non-anthropocentric world view has characterised most 'primal' cultures since time immemorial, and, in fact, obtained in many indigenous groups until the industrial revolution and after.

Defending the Earth Quotes by Murray Bookchin

Deep ecologists counter this criticism by the assertion that intelligence is not specific to humans, but a property of the totality of the universe of which humans are a manifestation. The integrative perspective evidenced here builds on the strengths of both schools of thought.
