Hodgkin's mural is of a banyan tree spreading its branches across the walls. Though his work did not become less expressive, there is a change of mood, a certain dialogue created between the exposed wood and the paint.

Howard Hodgkin: Last Paintings

Knightsbridge, 2009-11, oil on wood As you enter the second room, your attention is drawn to And the Skies Are Not Cloudy All Day, 2007-8 on the far wall. On returning, he was educated at Eton College and then at Bryanston School in Dorset.

Howard Hodgkin: Last Paintings at Gagosian

My favourite painting of the whole show is Knightsbridge. This is his first exhibition in Rome since he presented Seven Small Paintings at the British School in 1992. Data la gestualità imponente e i colori saturi, i piccoli dipinti sembrano gioielli, mentre i lavori di grande formato si rivelano opulenti e teatrali.

This is especially noticeable in paintings such as Don't Tell a Soul, 2016 and And the Skies Are Not Cloudy All Day, 2007-8. Its creation was achieved through a complex printing process which used many layers and an incredibly complex printing process to build up its colourful effect. Hodgkin's paintings have the effect of making us feel when we look at them.

He first suggested that I think about the mural as an Indian flag turning into a Union Jack. The exhibition as a whole was very enjoyable and a fantastic display of Hodgkin's late works.

Howard Hodgkin: Last Paintings

It shows the ancient watery city at various times of the day. Assertive compressed gestures, sweeping complex textures, a lush palette, and the dynamic interchange of light and dark are all traits of his distinctive signature.

Howard Hodgkin: New Paintings, Rome, March 15

He had decided on a career in art in early childhood and ran away from school to pursue this. During the Second World War, Eliot Hodgkin was an RAF officer, rising to Wing Commander, and was assistant to Sefton Delmer in running his black propaganda campaign against Nazi Germany.
