50 magical secret places and hidden gems in Cornwall

There are just six rooms and the coast path is right outside the door.

Five Secret Places in Cornwall (Just Don't Tell the Locals Who Told You...)

The accommodation had everything you could possibly need and the lovely touches such as flowers and shortbread and provisions so we could have a cup of tea or coffee on arrival was much appreciated. With just 1,0000 year-round inhabitants, Kilkee is as quaint an Irish village as can be. Not alone does it have a bar made with wood salvaged from the Armada, but guests can enjoy the preoccupations of its owners down through the centuries it was built in the early 1800s.

The Loch Ness Monster, as the newspapers now regularly called it, was no longer a local curiosity. However this has recently been cleared to leave a stunning beach that is also home to a resident seal colony. Because this really is an island idyll, with boathouses or wooden lodges to sleep in, stunning gardens to roam around, birdwatching to tweet about, and then, incongruously, a refurbished Roma caravan with an outdoor rolltop bath.

Top 10 Seaside Towns and Villages Near Leeds

Go zip-lining and tree-climbing, horse-riding or kayaking, before heading back to its Quay Bar and Brasserie for a family dinner, staying over in a luxurious Quay Suite. English coastal towns and villages include everything from the historic villages to loud and brash hyper entertainment centres. Finally, a world-class spa and high-end shopping and restaurant village layer in the requisite—and exquisite—indulgences.
