Numbers for regular battalions are uncomplicated and largely sequential up until 1914. Considering that there was not enough time to address the militia's deficiencies, the government turned again to volunteers to bolster the nation's defences in 1794.

YEOMANRY

It was initially established with three Squadrons. These were made responsible for the provision of horses, and relieved the officers of the burden and expense of maintaining the regiments. The resulting operation took the Turkish forces by surprise and they were forced to withdraw.

Northamptonshire Yeomanry

One entrant has hung a sign around his horses neck which reads Wer ist der Yo-Yos? Although the full dress was replaced in 1905 by the scarlet frock, it was reintroduced in 1908 without the busby. Although the regular army was disciplined and trusted enough to be used, it was too small and too widely dispersed to be an effective response, and the militia, while available as a local force, was not trusted.
