The 1995 Australian Workplace Industrial Relations Survey, The Australian Economic Review

It implies self-worth and a valued status in the society and the family. The only problem is that it is a zero sum game they are playing.

Work and family policies as industrial and employment entitlements

. Political cycles, corporate strategic planning time frames and generational limits are not the best way of looking at what we need to do to create and keep decent jobs.

Workplace relations in Australia

Employers need to discuss the issues with the pregnant employee to find solutions. Note that this survey was to be updated in 2000, however the Government has decided against conducting a new survey see discussion with officers of DEWR at Hansard, 2 June 2003, p.

The Future of Work and Industrial Relations in Australia

These results are corroborated by workforce surveys reported by the Equal Opportunity for Women in the Workplace Agency EOWA , which has noted that 70 per cent of all working women and working men have inflexible start and finish times. If you are unsure about how it applies to your situation you can call our Infoline on 13 13 94 or speak with a union, industry association or workplace relations professional. By placing decent jobs at the centre of things we can start to re-frame some of the elements of the wicked problem that we call industrial relations in Australia.

The 1995 Australian Workplace & Industrial Relations Survey (AWIRS 95): An OHS perspective

The PDF provides information about the AWRS data collection process and outcomes. About one third of female employees would be likely to be denied carers leave and similar entitlements due to their casual employment status.
