What is important to people living with dementia?: the 'long'

All RUGs are supported and managed by a local patient and public involvement coordinator. Kroenke K et al 2001 The PHQ-9: validity of a brief depression severity measure.

Assessing Cognitive Impairment in Older Patients

RUG membership was constrained to people over the age of 65 years to reflect the target population of the SENSE-Cog research study. How Many Interviews Are Enough? A common reason for removing an outcome item was if it fell outside of the remit of the COS.

Details of useful tools are available at the website of Alzheimer's Association CONCLUSIONS Caregiver support and non-pharmacological interventions to manage symptoms like BPSD are the main ingredients of dementia care. Telephone contact was also preferred by those with hearing problems as RUG members with hearing problems had amplified telephones at home. Judicious modification of the home environment will help.

Clinical Practice Guidelines for Management of Dementia

You may include the management of the co-morbid conditions also into the follow-up plan.
