Becoming World Class, with Class

There is never a perfect time to take action. You can only make progress if you start today, right now! And most importantly we're going to do it with the same values. This is a world-class event in a world-class city.

Becoming a World

Companies with a higher level of competition — both internally and externally have had to improve their efficiency, reduce costs and waste in order to survive. So we need to think differently and respond faster.

Becoming a World

We have been told that this event is larger in terms of athlete participants than the Olympic Games.

Becoming World Class, with Class

Despite the grumbling of the locals about the traffic congestion headaches they have caused, this is a spectacle only to be rivalled by the Olympics themselves. World class companies see higher levels of commitment and engagement, much lower accident rates, better attendance and higher retention.

What makes a world class company?

Organisations and leaders focused on values-based, not ego-based, leadership can attract rising stars, find amazing partners, and build momentum to last well into the future. Now, I challenge you to openly assess your life.

This is consistent with our theme that leadership is a responsibility to serve, not a license to rule. Conventional wisdom and thousands of business books spend an endless amount of time talking about the keys to outgrowing, out profiting and out maneuvering your competition.

Becoming a World

The more influence your leaders have, the more important it is for them to be people builders, not just rules police. Excellent processes mean less waste, less inventory, quicker changeover times and improved machinery utilisation. The ones who have been saying for years that they're going to do something but never do.

Becoming “world-class”? Reputation-building in a university merger

After all, Google did not and does not want to hire arrogant people, as it does not suit its company culture and mission. Just like our garden, sometimes it takes time for those seeds to grow.
