Author by : Victor C. In June, in the remote village of Tingolo in Busia county, western Kenya, police officers decided that an appropriate punishment for six young men who had gang-raped and left for dead a 16-year-old girl known as Liz was to cut the grass in front of the police station and provide the victim with some money for cheap painkillers. But the reality is that only 8% of Canadian charitable giving goes to international development, and of that only a fraction to women and girls.
