If we pass, we get to keep the planet. Here are a few excerpts which I liked: p 135 After dinner we paddle beneath a three-quarter moon, watch silver light dash across the tops of prop roots, and listen to the huff and puff of porpoises.

Liquid land : a journey through the Florida Everglades

The Seminole grew cane on secret hammocks in the Everglades, and pioneer families from Homosassa to Flamingo grew small plots of cane.

Liquid Land: A Journey Through the Florida Everglades

Levin, who covered the area by foot, boat and plane, successfully evokes the Everglades of yesterday and today, and details the possibilities that exist for its future. In Liquid Land, Ted Levin guides us past the dire headlines and into the magnificent swamp itself, where we come face-to-face with the plants, animals, and landscapes that remain and that will survive only if we protect them.

After the death of their father 10 years later, Alf and Pepe inherited the business. Levin has traveled extensively through the Everglades, often in the company of such dedicated individuals as Archie Jones, the conchologist who for fifty years has been studying and rescuing tree snails, or Frank Mazzotti, with whom Levin spent two weeks in the field monitoring American crocodiles. But it's also a serious book that in the end will make you angry that all this magnificence is being sacrificed for the wealth of sugar barons.
