Atlantic region

A recent USGS groundwater study in the Chesterfield County area Campbell and Landmeyer, 2014 was able to produce a MODFLOW groundwater flow model with 300 x 300 ft model cells that adequately simulated groundwater — surface water interactions.

Specifically, MDE needs information systems and simulation tools to evaluate the effects of increased withdrawals on the entire aquifer system in important subregions and throughout the Maryland Coastal Plain.

There are cheaper alternative supplies in the US; costs of transfer would exceed the value of most products that might be produced; the willingness to subsidize irrigation is declining; and the political, legal, environmental and other problems would be formidable. What are the 4 Atlantic provinces?

Water conservation measures are not yet widely employed, but the growing costs of obtaining high-quality water and avoiding stream water pollution are resulting in an increased recycling of water. With low evapotranspiration, the greater part of the precipitation enters streamflow. Comprehensive Assessment is Underway MGS and USGS started Phase I of the Comprehensive Assessment in January 2006.
