Review of Childcare Centre Part 2

However, we could not find any research on such a phenomenon, so the extent to which it occurs is unclear. Thus, it may be that many studies examining children living with relatives do, in fact, include some share of children living with non-relatives.

Efforts should be made to keep the number present at the review as small as possible. The Department is currently preparing for a separate consultation with children who have experienced interventions under the Act, however this had to be postponed in light of the current health crisis.

1. Review of child care eligibility

Some research has examined sibling separation particularly for children of incarcerated parents and those in foster care , as well as the share of children who live with siblings, but very little is known about the quality of sibling relationships or about sibling contact when siblings are separated. In addition, older caregivers may have greater difficulty caring for children than younger caregivers if they experience age-related health problems Ehrle and Geen, 2002a ; further, older caregivers may simply have less stamina for child rearing than would younger caregivers.

NC DHHS: Division of Child Development and Early Education

Very few studies have examined the over-arching population of children in non-parental care. Racial differences have also been found in the placement stability of foster children, with African American children typically experiencing greater instability Foster et al.
