It constantly reminded you of the importance of using your life's obstacles to strengthen others. I want the Lord to know I was really here and that I really lived.

Donna's approach is very real and honest. I found it extremely helpful in softening the everyday blows of life.

I think if the above mentioned book was titled The Top Five Disappointments of the Dying, it would have a different meaning - maybe more like the regrets were things that they themselves could've changed or done differently, as opposed to the disappointments that happen in life just because that's the nature of life! We visited Brandee and family in March over spring break and met our new granddaughter. Because of those hard times, which I refer to as my 'desert wandering', I am now in the promised land. I hope that there will be sports and band; I'm afraid that there will be so many kids missing out on these experiences! You can sit and cry and have pity party after pity party about things that are hard.

This isn't the life I signed up for! Anyway, enough about the weirdness.
